We enjoy Mark's comments, they are honest and truthful. This morning he had a good one on about John Kerry and the stories he was doing on Iraq were also very good. I was checking out the webb site and wanted to print out some of the articles to read. My question is how to print them off the webb site. Thanks for any help you can give me.

I want to take this opportunity to thank WGME for reporting the story of my nephew's homecoming yesterday from Baghdad, Iraq. This was the top story for the 6pm broadcast.

I was pleased that you responded to my initial email invitation to join us, but even more pleased with the piece you showed on your broadcast. It was very well done, and the team did a superb job of capturing the excitement and emotion of all of us.

Though Travis himself was a little overwhelmed with the large crowd and media, he was also happy to share this special day.

You not only did a great job covering this story, but by presenting it the way you did, other soldiers' families could get some comfort in seeing that our servicemen and women do come home safe.

I wondered if it would be possible to obtain a videotape of the footage that was shot by your photographer. We would like to purchase one if available.

Thank you again for sharing that special day with us.

Personal records, numbers discarded near state offices

BY GREGG LAGERQUIST WGME 13 News Staff AND JUDITH MEYER Sun Journal Managing editor/days

HALLOWELL — In a parking lot Dumpster beside the state's Lottery Commission on Water Street there were enough discarded state records, including Social Security numbers, names and birth dates, to provide everything a would-be thief would need to steal dozens of identities.

The records were found as part of a News 13 investigation, and the results, according to WGME's Gregg Lagerquist, "are alarming state leaders and identity theft experts" prompting immediate changes in the way Maine handles archival records.

The News 13 investigation was launched after Maine's Health and Human Services Department issued an apology for unintentionally giving a half-dozen client records to a woman who had nothing to do with those cases.

According to an Associated Press report last month, "Shana Proctor of Westbook said she was involved in a case with the department and brought paperwork to a state office to be pho-

Town Clerk Shirley Marquis was arrested by Mechanic Falls police about 1:30 a.m. Saturday on North Main Street, according to Androscoggin County Jail records. Police said the arrest was the result of a routine traffic stop.

Later, while she was being booked at the jail in Auburn, she was allegedly found to be possessing marijuana. Marquis was charged with trafficking in prison contraband.

Typically, a criminal suspect is asked if they are carrying illegal substances when they are booked into the county jail. The Class C charge

LEWISTON — Margaret Johnson of New Gloucester happens to share the same name as a court-appointed advocate for young clients of the Department of Health and Human Services.

The department has been mailing confidential records to Johnson, believing her to be the advocate. She's not.

And she's been horrified to receive three separate packets of confidential records concerning two cases of alleged child abuse in Lewiston.

Included in the packets have been parental driving and criminal history records, physical examination records, a woman's birth history, confidential information on the children's physical history, and the location of the children now.

There have also been photos of the children and narration of how they had been treated, all contained in envelopes with DHHS cover letters that state possession of confidential material by anyone not authorized to have it is "a serious offense" because the material contained in the packets is "sensitive in na-

Fugitives: Profiles of some of the people being sought by police in Twin Cities

Antonio "Monk" Rembert, 30, last known address 125 Horton St., Lewiston

Rembert has an extensive criminal history in the area dating back to 1995 when he was arrested for threatening a store clerk with a lighter during a downtown robbery. In 1998, police arrested him on federal charges for brandishing a shotgun during a fight at Pleasantview Acres in Lewiston. He was sent to prison for three years, but police say he has been in more trouble since his release.

Police have been searching for Rembert on charges that he failed to show up in court to answer a charge of aggravated assault. That charge stems from a September incident during which police say Rembert stabbed a 22-year-old man several times in the chest and stomach.

The victim, Corey Hall, survived his wounds. Police say he was stabbed by Rembert during a fight inside a hallway at 15 Pleasant St. in Auburn.

LEWISTON -- Like doctors in an emergency room — treating the worst cases first — local police routinely practice a kind of triage.

Catch the most dangerous crooks first.

The rest, mostly small-time violators who ignore fines or orders to appear in court, might wait years.

It's a reality of limited budgets and manpower, said Michael Bussiere, deputy chief of the Lewiston Police Department.

On any given day, the department has outstanding warrants on hundreds of people, Bussiere said. Those numbers have surged as high as 1,500.

"Eventually, people do get picked up," he said.

Sometimes, an out-of-town speeding ticket can turn into an arrest when the warrant pops up in a routine background check.

Maj. Gen. William Caldwell told reporters that the investigations into the crashes of three Army and one private helicopters were incomplete but "it does appear they were all the result of some kind of anti-Iraqi ground fire that did bring those helicopters down."

It was the first time a senior figure in the U.S. Iraq command had said publicly that all four helicopters were shot down.

Despite the losses, Caldwell said it was premature to conclude that the threat to U.S. aircraft posed by Sunni insurgents and Shiite militiamen had increased dramatically.

Dear Alan:

I am writing to express our sincere appreciation for the contribution you recently sent to the Mitchell Scholarship Program for our Summer Fellows Program. For tax purposes, a receipt is enclosed.

We live in a time of great challenges, and it has never been more important to secure the prosperity of our young people, our communities, and our state. By positively impacting our youth's educational opportunity through the Mitchell Scholarship Program, we are making a difference in their lives. At any given time there are over 500 Mitchell Scholars concurrently attending colleges and universities, strengthening their chances for a future of hope and achievement. For some – many of whom are first generation college students – this would be impossible without the help of a Mitchell Scholarship.

During their time in school, Mitchell Scholars are provided support services and meaningful opportunities to grow personally and professionally through volunteerism, mentoring, summer fellowships and leadership activities. The values learned through civic involvement are unique and vitally important. We believe that it is because of this ongoing support that Mitchell Scholars persist in college at remarkable rates of over 95%.

You can be confident that we will continue to work hard to ensure that more young people have a fair chance to access the educations they need. Please accept our heartfelt appreciation for your recent gift to the Mitchell Scholarship Program and for your continued commitment to your mission and to the youth of our state. Dear Mr. Cartwright,

Your station has outdone itself this year supporting and publicizing our school event!

Last year about this time, I wrote to you thanking you for the years of covering Massabesic Junior High Schools' community service projects sponsored by our Student Council. You responded with a nice note.

On March 24th, Keily Bennett and your photo journalist responded to our fax about the five hour dance marathon we had planned dedicated to all women facing breast cancer and honoring Joanne Crepeau, the wife of one of our teachers. They spent on unprecedented amount of time with our students and shared the great news with your viewers that we would raise over $12,000 for the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor. You aired information about the marathon six different times in the next 24 hours!!

We have collected nearly all of our dance pledges and have actually exceeded the $13,000. mark! We will be presenting our HUGE check to Jackson Laboratory on Friday, May 14th at 1 P.M. at a "Think Pink" Celebration. We would love to thank Ms. Bennett and your photographer in person for their work on our behalf at that event. (I am not asking for more promotion of the event, just an opportunity to say thanks.)

In a world with much news being negative, its refreshing to have media that is responsive to our call for coverage of teens doing good for their community!

With BIG thanks.

Terry Cole WGME 13 1335 Washington Avenue, Suite 1 Portland, ME 04103

Dear Terry,

On behalf of The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital at Maine Medical Center, thank you for your generous sponsorship support of The Best of Broadway 2007. The show was a tremendous success both in the quality of the performance and in generating over $33,000 for children and families cared for at The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital.

We were honored to welcome the 41st President of the United States, George H. W. Bush and the woman for whom the children's hospital was named, Barbara Bush. Their enthusiasm for the performance and for the children's hospital was very apparent that evening.

We have already set the date for The Best of Broadway 2008 - May 10, 2008. Please mark your calendar to join us once again for this very special performance which helps us provide the best care possible for Maine's children. We will be contacting you over the next few weeks to review the annual report and to discuss future sponsorship opportunities.

With appreciation,
